

Investors pulled a record of $450bn out of actively managed stock funds in 2024, as a shift into cheaper index-tracking investments reshapes the asset management industry.

The outflows from stockpicking mutual funds eclipse last year's previous high of $413bn, according to the data from Emerging Portfolio Fund Research (EPFR).

